NUMB. 3114

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1744.

Extract from a Private Letter.

Rome, February 8.

HE Court seems to be exceedingly embarrassed by the Arrival of a British Squadron before Ancona. Conferences are held daily upon this Subject, and one would imagine, from the Hurry the Ministry is in, that they believed the very Being of the State to be in Danger; yet there want not some Politicians, and those too esteemed of the first Rank for Penetration, who believe that this is no more than a Feint; and that, in Reality, our Government is well enough pleased with an Accident, at which they pretend to be so much alarmed; because it is certain, that the Arrival of this Squadron will free them from another Inconvenience, that was still greater, I mean, the long Stay of the Spanish Army in the Ecclesiastical State; against which his Holiness durst not act at all, till the Arrival of these Hereticks afforded him an Opportunity of doing it with Safety. In short, if we may guess, from the Orders which have been issued upon this Occasion, the Ministry are more apprehensive of Count de Gages seizing the Citadel of Ancona, than of the English making themselves Masters of the Port; since General Manfroni has actually given the necessary Directions for marching a Body of Troops to reinforce the Garrison there, and, at the same Time, the Magistrates have, with great Civility, furnished the English Commodore with a plentiful Supply of fresh Provisions, while the Spaniards went without. The Consequence of these Proceedings will infallibly be the quickening of the Count de Gages's Retreat, who has already secured his Artillery, Ammunition, and Baggage, and made such Dispositions, as to be able to withdraw from Prince Lobkowitz with a little Loss, as he suffered in retiring from Marshal Traun. He is certainly a very able, tho' a very severe Officer; and one of his Soldiers gave him his true Character, when he said, That under the Command of M. de Gages, they were afraid of no body, but himself. But with all this, he is excessively hated by our Peasants, whom he has treated with as much Rigour, as he has used our Nobility with Contempt; so that it is not to be wondered, that we are heartily rejoiced at the Thoughts of being rid of him.

General Post-Office, London, February 8, 1743.

WHEREAS the Post-Boy, going out with the West Mail from this Office, was this Morning, between Five and Six o'Clock, attack'd on the Highway at the Station Place, on the other Side of Turnham-Green, by a single Highwayman, who took the said Post-Boy into a Field adjoining to the Road, and opened the Mail, and carried off the Exeter and Plymouth Bags: The Person, who committed this Robbery, is a middle-sized Man, and had on a blue Great Coat, with his Hat tied over his Head, and he rode on a Sorrel Horse with a White Face, about Fourteen Hands high, and made off for Acton, the Oxford Road.
